Partnership Charters

When community groups work together for a common goal, a lot more can be accomplished than if they work alone. Yet we all know that it is often difficult for individuals with different agendas to work together successfully; when organizations with diverse missions, funding sources, boards of directors, and objectives are in partnership, the potential for conflict grows exponentially. It is very important to spell out roles, responsibilities, and conflict management strategies at the outset, to avoid the destructive conflict that can be the end of good projects.

The following worksheets give you a framework to use when discussing the creation of a Charter for your new partnership. The Charter is designed to describe the vision, goals, objectives, roles, and responsibilities, to minimize misunderstandings, false assumptions, and hidden agendas.
